The colorful attire worn by the graduates, faculty, and the officers of the college on the occasion of commencement has roots in medieval history. The gown is an adaptation of the robe of a friar priest, the hood of the monk's cowl, the mortarboard cap of the skull cap worn to protect tonsured heads against the drafts of medieval classrooms.

The Gown The gown indicates the highest degree held by the wearer. The bachelor's gown has long pointed sleeves. The master's gown has long oblong sleeves. The doctor's gown is distinguished by very full sleeves with three black or colored velvet bars and by velvet on the front.

The Tassel The position of the tassel on the cap indicates whether or not the graduate's degree has been conferred. If the wearer has graduated, the tassel is worn on the left. If not, it is worn on the right. The tassel on the doctoral cap is gold.

The Stole Students wearing the broad gold stoles are members of Phi Theta Kappa, the international two-year college honor society that recognizes outstanding scholastic achievement.

The Cord Students wearing the gold cords over the gown are graduating with honors.

The Hood The hood worn by those with masters or doctorate degrees bears the colors of the university from which the degree was received and the discipline or major subject area.

Hood Colors	Apricot	Nursing

*M*essage from the President

Welcome to the 45th commencement at College of the Redwoods. We are pleased that you could be here today to celebrate the accomplishments of the members of the class of 2010.

I would like to extend my personal congratulations to each of the graduates. We are pleased that they have been a part of the CR community, and we expect great things from each of them in the future. Along with their degrees and certificates, we know that they take with them some good memories, some treasured friendships, and a deep satisfaction that comes from success. Today, they share their achievements with family and friends.

*C*ongratulation, Class of 2010!

You have officially reached this significant milestone: graduation from College of the Redwoods! I am proud of you and all that you have done to achieve your educational goal here at the Mendocino Coast campus. Every one of you has dedicated yourself to work tirelessly to be where you are today and should be commended for never giving up and always staying the course. In many ways, today's graduation is proof that you have successfully weathered many storms and have overcome countless obstacles. As such, take pride in your hard work for you have now turned one of your dreams into reality.

As you know, commencement simply means the end of one journey and the beginning of another. Because of your fortitude and relentless commitment, I have every confidence that you will continue to persist and accomplish what you set out to do in the years ahead. During your journey, I encourage you to take an active role in shaping the future of our society as well. Know that you have what it takes to empower yourself to make a difference in the lives of others and to create a ripple effect where great things will flow from your desire to live your best life and do your best work.

In closing, may you find the strength to stand up after each fall, may you find fulfillment in these uncertain times, and may your presence bring joy to others. Always believe in yourself and your potential to make a positive (and lasting) impact.
